In addition to the information supplied in this guidebook - there are a number of worksheets available to download throughout the book which will assist you with implementing ideas into your own organisation.
Australia’s National Landscapes

Nature motivates people to travel to Australia more than any other experience.

Based on research conducted by Tourism Australia in 2010
Get on board and help show the world why there’s nothing like Australia

WHAT’S IT ALL ABOUT?

In research conducted by Tourism Australia, nature motivates people to travel to Australia more than any other experience. Australia therefore has the opportunity to be at the forefront of the global, nature-based tourism industry.

Australia’s National Landscapes Program is a partnership between tourism and conservation, which aims to:

- promote Australia’s world class, high quality visitor experiences;
- increase the value of tourism to regional economies;
- enhance the role of protected areas in those economies;
- build support for protecting our natural and cultural assets.

The Program has identified Australia’s iconic natural and cultural destinations and now aims to improve the delivery of quality visitor experiences within them.

STATUS OF THE PROGRAM

Tourism Australia and Parks Australia partnered in 2005 to develop Australia’s National Landscapes Program. Since then, 16 areas have joined the Program, completing the collection. Australia’s National Landscapes are shown above.

In order to become a National Landscape, each area had to undertake an extensive application process. National Landscapes accepted into the program are expected to participate in a range of activities, such as Landscape Positioning and regional planning to underpin regional success.

For further information visit www.tourism.australia.com/nl

To learn more about the National Landscape Program click here to download the flyer.
Shark Bay is also a World Heritage-listed area and the 'Shark Bay World Heritage Property Strategic Plan 2008-2020' incorporates the protection of superlative natural phenomena, formations or features, including:

- the strongly contrasting colours of the dunes/cliffs, beaches and adjacent ocean of Peron Peninsula; and
- coastal scenery – Zuytdorp cliffs, Dirk Hartog Island, Peron Peninsula, Heirisson Prong, Bellefin Prong, the fragum beaches of L’haridon Bight and inundated birridas (claypans) and lagoons such as Big Lagoon.

Please provide a map of the proposed National Landscape experience boundary.

The proposed boundaries for the National Landscape area would run along the existing boundaries of Shire of Shark Bay, the Shire of Carnarvon and the Shire of Exmouth.
It’s no surprise that Ningaloo – Shark Bay has been chosen as one of Australia’s National Landscapes

How will this benefit tourism in Ningaloo - Shark Bay?
Let’s rephrase that question: Why should you align your business with Ningaloo - Shark Bay and Australia’s National Landscapes Program?

There are plenty of benefits. Here are some:

1. Generate more income by responding to growing international and local demand for experiential tourism – longer stay, higher yielding customers.
2. Gain an edge on your competitors – by aligning your business offering with your National Landscapes global point-of-difference.
3. Achieve higher yields by shifting to value-based pricing – because experience-based tourism is worth more than goods or services.
4. Earn a much greater return on investment - because experience-based tourism isn’t about large investments in capital infrastructure.
5. Excite and inspire your employees – by developing and delivering innovative, original tourism experiences that capture your customers’ emotions.
6. See happy customers become online and word-of-mouth advocates for your business.
7. See the changes in your business as your visitors stay longer and spend more - because of an enhanced experience offering.
8. Potential to develop partnerships that improve the effectiveness of your marketing dollar.
9. Opportunity to tap into potential partners and suppliers who work with you to create fantastic experiences for your guests.
10. Potential to attract strategic investment or partnership opportunities for your business.
11. Opportunity to motivate and bring together members of your local businesses community to help create an all-encompassing experience for your visitors.
12. Global marketing support for Ningaloo – Shark Bay experiences through Tourism Australia’s PR and marketing activities.
Did you know:
Recent research from Teletext Holidays revealed more than 25% of Britons were moved to book an exotic holiday after seeing a Facebook friend’s holiday snaps online. Almost one fifth of those people also admitted to booking an identical trip.
Meet your best customer: The Experience Seeker

Experience Seekers can be found in any age group, income range and stage of life. They come from many different countries, including Australia. They are adventurous and self-motivated, love the outdoors and are ecologically minded.

THEY WANT:

Deliver those experiences and your Experience Seekers will tell the world!
What makes the Ningaloo - Shark Bay Landscape unique in the world, not just Australia
Each National Landscape offers a uniquely engaging experience of nature and culture

Find the uniqueness – your Landscape Positioning

The first step involved locals distilling what Ningaloo - Shark Bay has that isn’t found anywhere else in the world.

Landscape Positioning workshops were held throughout the Landscape.

The goal was to discover and document the core positioning that distinguishes Ningaloo - Shark Bay from other Landscapes throughout Australia.

This agreed Landscape Positioning is not about an advertising campaign, a new logo or even a tag line. Positioning is the engine that drives the way you offer and deliver your product now and for decades to come. It permeates all experiences, creative approaches, communication and marketing.

It’s what differentiates you. It’s your competitive advantage.

The unique voice of Ningaloo – Shark Bay’s Positioning underpins the words and images we use to sell our Landscape to the world. The more consistently we all use those words and images, the stronger our message.
The Landscape Positioning for Ningaloo – Shark Bay

HOW DO YOU EMBRACE THIS POSITIONING?

It’s about how you, your business and the entire community connect with this unique identity. The more people (directly or indirectly) who have some involvement projecting the positioning, the quicker your target audience will understand what it is that makes your Landscape unique.

‘Uninhibited’ means you are free to share your own love of Ningaloo – Shark Bay.

Think about the first time you came here. Think about what you love about this place, why you chose to be here. What makes Ningaloo – Shark Bay so special to YOU? Your passion is contagious. Tell visitors your stories. Share your experiences. Because that’s what they’re seeking.

THE ESSENCE OF NINGALOO – SHARK BAY IS UNINHIBITED FREEDOM

This western most point of Australia is a meeting point teeming with life and movement. An uninhibited landscape connected with its surrounds through unparalleled access to land and sea activity. All around, it is awonderfully spontaneous and naturally serene environment.

1,500 kilometres of coastline along the most westerly point of Australia offering extraordinary migratory seasonality linked with climatic conditions unique to the area. Some of the clearest skies in the world to view Stromatolites, Mt Augustus, and multitudes of National Parks offering biodiversity in mega fauna, species and phenomenal marine life. There are whale sharks, manta rays and turtles nesting along Ningaloo Coast. There are sea grass beds within a coral fringing reef, home to dugongs. The contrasts, isolation and interaction make this landscape a truly unique World Heritage area.

Colour and harmony exist throughout the Landscape. From the vast marine life, pristine water, spectacular landscapes and vast array of National Parks.

Shark Bay heritage
Humpback whales, manta rays, sea snakes, turtles and dugongs are just some of the extraordinary marine wildlife visitors can connect with. Nowhere in the world can you view such a vast array in the one place.

Ancient beginnings
The National Parks (including marine) showcase an amazing array of protected species and mega fauna along with the Hamelin Stromatolites depicting the first life form on earth.

Migrating Marine
The world’s largest sea grass meadows offer a unique marine environment where the world’s biggest fish migrate. An opportunity to view, snorkel and swim alongside the largest fish in the world in a controlled environment.

Remote yet accessible
11 hours from Perth by car the Landscape has been protected through generations. Yet when there, access and immersion to what is offered is unparalleled to anything less than the Galapagos Islands or Grand Canyon.

Ningaloo Marine Park
Home to Ningaloo Reef – the largest fringing reef in Australia. Literally metres from shore are coral gardens rich with a spectacular array of marine life such as whale sharks, manta rays, and turtles nesting along Ningaloo Coast.

Climatic Location
Because it is located as a meeting point between temperate and tropical waters, this encourages the vast diversity of marine wildlife. It is the most westerly point of Australia offering spectacularly clear skies.

Dual World Heritage Listing
The only Landscape in Australia to satisfy the World Heritage criteria of natural beauty, ecological processes, biological diversity and earth’s history and one of very few sites in the world where two world heritage areas meet.

Ningaloo Heritage
Humpback whales, manta rays, sea snakes, turtles and dugongs are just some of the extraordinary marine wildlife visitors can connect with. Nowhere in the world can you view such a vast array in the one place.

WHAT MAKES YOU UNIQUE?
Consider what your landscape offers. The following chart was developed based on the original Landscape application and evolved throughout the workshop positioning process. This chart highlights the key validation to justify your central Positioning statement. This is the content (and context) that makes the Experience Seeker target market believe landscape Ningaloo – Shark Bay is unlike anywhere else in the world.
Building your business on Ningaloo - Shark Bay's Landscape Positioning

SECTION 3
Building your business on the Ningaloo – Shark Bay Landscape Positioning

Your competitive advantage comes from turning this Landscape’s competitive advantage into the EXPERIENCE you provide your visitors.

Whether your business engages directly with visitors or operates behind the scenes, your most valuable marketing tool is the experience you give your visitors. If their experience rates an 8/10 or more, you can expect word-of-mouth to help sell your product or National Landscape.

So what is an ‘experience’? An experience is what your visitor gains from the combination of activities, settings and personal interactions they participate in when they visit your region. Think unique, unexpected and exotic; things that your guests can’t do anywhere else in the world – the kinds of things that mean they’ll post a photo on Facebook straight away and still talk about them at dinner parties twenty years later.

This overview includes ideas and thought starters which can help you build a real competitive advantage. When refreshing your product or developing new experiences, consider how you could reflect the essence of uninhibited freedom in everything you do.

Ten years of economic research has shown that true experiential tourism is not only a real point-of-difference in a crowded market place, it’s also a product for which Experience Seeker tourists are prepared to pay a premium. As an added bonus, experiences can be a much lower-cost investment because they don’t necessarily involve capital infrastructure changes or upgrades.

THE EXPERIENCE SPECTRUM AND YOUR BOTTOM LINE

As a business or organisation in Ningaloo - Shark Bay you’re providing goods and services to visitors at different points on the Experience Spectrum. The higher your offerings are on the spectrum, the better your competitive positioning and the greater your returns.

As you can see, the further along the spectrum the product is, the more special it is for your visitor, the more they will value it and the more they will be prepared to pay for it. Think about ways this spectrum can apply to your business or service. The bare bones of the theory are:

The commodity is the basic product which is available to everyone. The goods are the tangible products we can sell based on the commodity. The goods and commodities enable you to add services. Goods and commodities provide opportunities to create an experience.

Six Steps to Delivering a Great Visitor Experience

1. Focus, Focus, Focus!
   - Who is your target market and what experiences do they want?
   - What do you want them to take away from the experience: feelings, images, memories?
   - What do you want them to be telling others about the experience?
   - You can’t be all things to all customers. But if you focus on Experience Seekers and provide memorable, world-class experiences for them, the rest will come!

2. What experiences fit with your business?
   - What can your business offer?
   - What community resources (natural and built physical assets, community members and organisations) can you involve?
   - What partners/suppliers could you involve?

3. Plan the experience
   - Your guests should be as actively involved as possible - not passive spectators.
   - Identify the theme around which you will build the Experience – look to your Landscape Positioning for inspiration.
   - The experience should involve their emotions and senses and include a ‘wow!’ factor that makes it truly memorable.
   - The experience must be authentic and ‘on brand’: consistent with Landscape Positioning.
   - Plan every detail – such as timing to allow for visitor response and engagement, sequencing, best group size, safety and weather, dealing with guest physical limitations.
   - Remember, you are providing a world-class experience to a discerning market. Leave nothing to chance.
   - Set your price – Experience Seekers will pay a premium for a premium experience (unique, authentic, personalised, ‘wow!’), but have a well-developed sense of perceived value.

4. Training and test flight
   - Make sure your staff and any partners clearly understand your guests’ expectations, the precise details of the experience and their role in delivering it.
   - Test the product in real time with non-paying ‘guests’ and tweak as needed.

5. Market and communicate
   - How will you market to potential consumers and to businesses?
   - Increasingly, customers (actual and potential) talk to each other. Will you monitor these conversations or maybe join them?
   - How will you maintain contact with past customers?

6. Deliver, evaluate, modify

GREAT CUSTOMER EXPERIENCES ARE:

- A source of long-term competitive advantage
- Created by consistently exceeding customers physical and emotional expectations
- Differentiated by stimulating emotion
- Enabled through inspirational leadership and facilitated by culture
- Revenue generating and can reduce costs
- An embodiment of the Landscape Positioning

Colin Shaw, Revolutionize Your Customer Experience (2005)
THE POWER OF EXPERIENCES

Tony’s Sunrise Motel sells accommodation. The staff are polite and efficient, the place is immaculate and there’s a TV in every room. They even have an outdoor restaurant that sells fish, chicken and beef dinners. It’s a nice place to stay.

Just like most other hotels in the world.

There’s no way you would write a letter home, post on Facebook or brag about staying there, because Tony is selling “a nice place to stay”; a commonly available thing that is also available in London, Paris and Rome.

But what if Tony offered more? What if he used his nice place to stay to help sell experiences that people couldn’t get anywhere else?

For example on Friday nights, Tony invites a local Aboriginal elder to share stories around the campfire. His guests have the option of having dinner first and can order drinks at the bar.

By the end of the night, Tony’s guests have probably bought a couple of drinks and eaten a meal BUT they’ve also learnt about local culture, enjoyed a connection with the Aboriginal people, posted a photo of themselves on Facebook with an Aboriginal elder and come away with the story of an experience they can’t get anywhere else in the world.

So, Tony has sold more because of the experience he’s offered his guests.

Plus, when his guests’ friends decide they’d like this experience too, because Tony’s is the only place offering it, the first part of the Australian trip that they’ll book is two nights in Tony’s Sunrise Motel.

That’s the power of experiences.

What’s the experience you could offer that your guests can’t get anywhere else?
Here are some ideas for specific service providers

ACCOMMODATION SUPPLIERS

In this Landscape accommodation can be anything from camping in the rugged environment to a sumptuous six star experience. Communicating enrichment might be as simple as the open and welcoming way your staff engage with your customers around your property.

You could help your visitors understand this spectacular desert ecosystem by hosting information evenings or presentations by a local ranger, conservation organisation or traditional owner. Another way to help them feel a sense of enrichment and challenge is to highlight the amazing amount of work and research being undertaken by across the region.

While you’re probably already doing this, you might like to pair up with tour operators or conservation organisations to package experiences. Think spiritual, adventurous and open. You’d be surprised at just how many Experience Seekers are prepared to pay for tailor made tours that enable them to get involved in, or contribute to, local environmental work.

The Experience Seeker is looking for sustainable travel credentials. Ensuring your tourism business has independent environmental accreditation sends a strong message to visitors that you’re committed to sustainable business practices and operate to world’s best-practice standards.

VISITOR INFORMATION CENTRES

Visitor Information Centres are one of the most important connections the visitor has with your Landscape. How does your information centre encourage visitors to experience the Landscapes spiritual discovery, adventure and openness? What about the layout, look and feel of your centre?

How much do you know about the rare plants and animals that have adapted for survival in this arid environment? Armed with factual information, you might like to tell them about the spectacular geology - monoliths, mountains, sand dunes and desert plains or the climate that has given rise to a surprising range of ecosystems, plants and animals.

How detailed, accurate or intellectual is the information provided? How easily can the visitor learn through participation? Highlight events where they can get a real sense the spiritual heartland of Australia; its history and its culture, or activities that they can get involved in such as species monitoring or community clean up days. You could also display brochures or posters from the conservation organisations that are working in your area.

TOUR OPERATORS

For Experience Seekers it is vital the experience is warm and welcoming, providing a sense of what this arid environment is like to live in. The concept of enrichment can help you create and deliver amazing experiences. You could plan the itinerary around the concept spiritual or discovery by creating product options that might include an opportunity to meet a ranger, a scientist or traditional Aboriginal owner, or teaching them to gather bush tucker, or helping them spot a rare animal in its natural environment.

Timing and interpretation is important in natural environments: allow time to listen for birds in the early morning, or to learn how Aboriginal Australians lived in a sustainable way for tens of thousands of years, surviving on the resources of the land while caring for their country and maintaining a balance with nature. Explain what they might feel or sense when they are swimming, hiking, and discovering native animals. Think about how you learn through participating while visiting untouched waterholes, spiritual sites and adventurous wilderness.

Eco Certification is a great mechanism to help you deliver high-quality and innovative tourism experiences with its practical guide to ecologically sustainable practices and cultural responsibility. Eco Certification also helps visitors choose genuine and authentic tourism experiences, providing an opportunity to learn about the environment with an operator who is committed to achieving best practice, contributing to the conservation of the environment and helping local communities.

Make it easy, make it free of complication. That’s freedom. That’s the Ningaloo-Shark Bay Landscape.

RETAIL, FOOD AND BEVERAGE

While food and local produce will not be the prime reasons Experience Seekers visit your Landscape, it is an integral part of ‘word-of-mouth worthiness’. Be as creative as you can with your menu; create tastes exclusive to your Landscape with seasonal dishes and lots of local produce.

Consider stocking, or become a retail outlet for locally made products, wines and crafts. Another idea is to display some local photography or imagery on your walls to share with the visitor. You could also make arrangements to display local artists’ work for sale.

Point visitors to local suppliers; whether a business down the road or in the next town. If you know the owner of the business, tell your visitor to “mention my name and they’ll look after you”. This is also a great way to build business networks across the Landscape. Why not see how many visitors you can each refer to the other? The Experience Seeker is looking for local produce and local knowledge.

Share your stories of local enriching experiences that you enjoy – whether it is a spectacular spot for sunset views, a quiet place to walk or a great cultural exhibition or performance. Visitors are looking for these real experiences.

LOCAL COUNCILS AND GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Think about all the ways these agencies communicate with locals and visitors, both directly and indirectly. Consider signage, community services and public infrastructure. All can portray the concept of enrichment.

Why not use the positioning to set the theme for community development initiatives or school competitions. A creative writing competition could be themed ‘The most adventurous thing about...’. Local art competition prizes could be awarded to the artwork or photograph that best reflects the essence of enrichment.

To build community understanding of the region’s unique positioning, you can also reflect the messages in your communications – such as local newsletters, media releases or other regular communication materials.

PLANNING AND INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT

The Landscape Positioning concepts of enrichment can also be applied when planning infrastructure. In assessing development applications, designing visitor infrastructure, or even considering the placement of signage, ask yourself questions like:

> How does this development complement the Landscape values – spiritual, adventurous, open or creative?
> Does this infrastructure provide the visitor with open views of the untouched environment?
> How does the development encourage the visitor to enrich themselves in the environment or experience the untouched landscape?
> How do the colours and materials used complement the spiritual environment?
Highlighting your uniqueness to visitors

EVENTS
Consider theming events around the concept of enrichment. When supporting local community events you might like to include criteria that ask the participants or organisers to describe how they will reflect the Landscape Positioning. Events that feature your natural environment will help position the Landscape in the visitor’s mind.

Whatever you consider, try to relate it back to something an Experience Seeker would love to be able to share with friends. Think of the ‘brag-ability’ factor. Remember, they can post on Facebook within minutes to share the story of your Landscape.

ENVIRONMENT AND CULTURAL INTERPRETATION
There are exceptional stories to be told and experiences that can be built around different places to become enriched. Where the sun sets on Uluru as the desert readies for evening is one of the world’s most spiritual spots and a perfect place to be enriched.

Enrichment could become a theme in interpretive material or signage. “Larapinta Trail: one of life’s most valuable experiences” or “Uluru: welcome to our rich cultural history”. Perhaps the integrity of walking around the base of Uluru with an Aboriginal guide, or the experience of dependable when visiting the HQ of the Royal Flying Doctor Service.

Enrichment means improving the quality of something by adding something special. You might like to link up with fauna and flora monitoring programs or explore ways to encourage Experience Seeker visitors to get involved. These activities allow visitors to immerse themselves in the environment, discovering new and exciting things to blog about.

Aboriginal culture, and Aboriginal peoples’ relationship to the natural environment, is of significant interest to visitors, especially those from overseas. Work with the traditional owners to develop materials for cultural interpretation, and seek permission to ensure you share information in an appropriate and respectful manner.

There are distinct advantages in employing or contracting local Aboriginal guides to deliver cultural interpretation first hand. Speak to your Regional Tourism Organisation to find contact details for Aboriginal tour guides or aspiring Aboriginal tour guides you can link in with.

PERSONAL TOUCHES FOR ALL
Landscape stories can live at every touch point. Consider your phone message - you could even create a story about the enriching environment to engage with the customer while they are on hold.

To help build understanding, you might like to incorporate information on the positioning in employee information, orientation and customer service training programs. Encourage your employees to consider how the concept of enrichment fits with their experience of the Landscape or lifestyle and how they might be able to incorporate it into their customer service.

The Language of Ningaloo – Shark Bay

‘Uninhibited freedom’: the essence of the Ningaloo – Shark Bay Landscape

‘Uninhibited freedom’ is the feeling the traveller will get from the Ningaloo – Shark Bay Landscape. This emotional territory connects the consumer at a subconscious level to the emotional space of Ningaloo – Shark Bay. This essence should drive all creative thinking for communication, advertising and public relations activity. It should relay the message of how a Ningaloo – Shark Bay experience creates a feeling of ‘uninhibited freedom’ for the Experience Seeker.

‘Uninhibited freedom’ is the essence of the intangible messages that come through in your Landscape. The Positioning workshops conducted with key opinion leaders in your area, found your Landscape to have:

- Stunning contrasts, vivid colours and changing contours
- Experiences enabling the visitor to connect with wildlife, family and locals
- Where the desert meets the sea: vast rivers, rocks and reef
- Unique splendid isolation and unspoilt beauty in a remote landscape
- A pristine environment of untouched coastline
- The opportunity to immerse and interact with nature in a very intimate environment
- Cool nights, warm days, clear skies, with the outback by the sea and reef
- An accessible interactive marine wonderland(scape)
- All manner of wildlife and people
- Untapped, raw landscapes offering an abundant array of life
- Connected with nature in a pure and innocent way

EDITORIAL STYLE

The best approach to editorial style is based on an awareness of what motivates the Experience Seeker – our key target. Be descriptive and honest, clear and informative. Refer the reader to websites where applicable, rather than writing too much. Always leave the reader wanting a little more. Remember to consider your landscapes Landscape Positioning when you are constructing copy for your editorial.

KEY WORDS

This is an important aspect of your communications. Words should be tied back to the essence of your Landscape. Words such as:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Wilderness</th>
<th>Wild</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ancient</td>
<td>Contrasting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unexpected</td>
<td>Diverse</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Raw</td>
<td>Colourful</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Accessible</td>
<td>Pristine</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Remote</td>
<td>Abundant</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Innocent</td>
<td>Untouched</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unspoilt</td>
<td>Friendly</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

HOW DOES THIS LOOK WHEN YOU CONSIDER IT REPRESENTED AS A WORD MATRIX?

- It’s a laid back environment with a switched on understanding.
- Intimate and inspirational insight into nature.
- Where the outback meets the coast.
- A living natural aquarium with no boundaries.
- It’s an untouched, pristine environment with unspoilt beauty.
- A personal moment in time, with incomparable experiences.
- Unspoilt wilderness, majestic coast and people to meet.
- A region connecting locals with extraordinary marine life.
- Stunning contrasts, vivid colors, changing contours.
- Cool nights, warm days, clear skies.
SPEAKING IN ONE VOICE

When presenting your Landscape, it is important you speak as best you can with one voice. Embracing the essence of ‘uninhibited freedom’ and presenting this in a way that supports your product adds to the cumulative experience visitors will seek. They will spend time across a range of locations, events and experiences. You must make sure every one of their touch points culminates in their high praise of the overall experience.

CONNECTING TO ‘UNINHIBITED FREEDOM’

We have identified the following words you might also consider. These words all have an association with the essence and could be used when drafting copy for advertising material or press releases.

Primary Word Out Takes

Uninhibited =
- Unconstrained: unrestrained, natural, comfortable
- Candid: straightforward, straight talking, forthright, upfront, honest, frank
- Open: relaxed, sincere and unaffected, approachable, receptive, amicable
- Natural: innate, unaffected, genuine and sincere
- Spontaneous: impulsive, unprompted, spur of the moment, natural, unstructured, unplanned
- Outgoing: sociable, friendly, gregarious, extrovert

Secondary word out takes

Wild: unrestrained and unrestricted, untamed, natural habitat

Cultivated: refined, educated, cultured, sophisticated, urbane

Sophisticated: advanced, superior, polished, gracious

Innate: native, inborn, instinctive, unaffected, effortless, spontaneous, genuine
THE COLOURS

It is important to use colour and image in a way that is sympathetic to the core values of your Landscape. The colours shown here are suggestions only. This example illustrates how a family of colour can be built and then applied. The colours shown here are from the palette of the Australian outback and the contrast of the beaches and the reef. These colours represent the earth, but also of the unique and varied experiences one can expect on a journey through your Landscape.

CONSISTENT USE OF PHOTOGRAPHY

In order to keep us ‘all on the same page’ with our ‘one voice’, we have included examples of photography that represent the look, tone and feel of Ningaloo – Shark Bay. It’s part of the visual language of Ningaloo – Shark Bay and it needs to be just as consistent as the spoken and written voice. This will give the Experience Seeker a clear message about what makes Ningaloo – Shark Bay unique in the world.

Remember, it’s always ideal to have people in the majority of your photographs to bring the experience on offer to life. Tourism Australia has an outstanding photo gallery library which is available for all tourism operators to look through, consider and utilise free of charge.

How you can use your Landscape Positioning in your communications

Being part of the National Landscapes Program means your operation is recognised as belonging to a region renowned for its outstanding natural beauty and cultural significance.

You communicate with visitors and potential visitors to your region in a myriad of ways. Each interaction between visitors and your business is an opportunity to reinforce your Landscapes Landscape Positioning.

This section of the Guidebook offers suggestions for utilising the Positioning in your marketing activity communications, as well as suggestions to help you make the most of your contact with visitors. Some of these can be implemented in the short term, without cost implications, and others are longer term goals to be integrated in your business activities as they arise over time – such as brochure re-prints or website updating and design.

These are guidelines only – it’s important to keep in contact with your local tourism officer.

WEB SITE AND SOCIAL MEDIA

Consistent presentation of your Landscape Positioning online will give potential visitors, including web tourists, a clear ‘picture’ of what makes your landscape such a unique place.

That’s why it’s important for all stakeholders to use consistent visual, spoken and written language of the landscape, across all touch points.

A collection of content has been created to assist you with your communication of your landscape. These include factsheets for media and consumer, suggested itinararies and conservation factsheets and wildlife calendar

Click here to download Factsheets, Itineraries, Conservation Fact sheets and Wildlife Calendar

In developing a new website, or when updating content on your current site, aim to incorporate iconic images, colours from the region, and a selection of the key phrases and descriptive words that arose from the Landscape’s Positioning workshops. (See page 22) Another opportunity to differentiate your business is to see if you can reflect the ‘essence’ of your Landscape in the style of your writing or communications.

Your Landscape Positioning may be communicated in a more personal tone or honest reflections.

Incorporate sections on your site that can be updated easily and frequently - a ‘blog’, Twitter or Facebook–style status updates to communicate honestly and frequently

Photos of your staff or family enjoying the landscape will demonstrate that visitors will have the chance to ‘do as the locals do’

If you haven’t already, consider establishing a social media presence as a means of staying in touch with your visitors in ‘realtime’ – upload this morning’s sunrise pics, wildlife sightings, weather conditions, information on community activities and events. With positioning values such as ‘friendly, raw, accessible, outgoing, unconstrained, open’ the world of social media offers ideal opportunities to connect with your past or potential visitors.

STATIONERY

- When updating your corporate stationery, consider including your Landscape’s colour palette.
- You could add a one-liner logo that reflects your business vision and incorporates primary words or key phrases.
- Dare to be a little unrestrained—you can resist the ‘norm’ of corporate stationery design and reflect the personality of your business and the region.
- Take the opportunity to add a friendly handwritten message when sending hard copy confirmations to guests, an easy way of being sincere and open.

BROCHURES, SIGNAGE AND VISITOR INFORMATION including information provided enroute / tour interpretive material / hotel compendiums/ waiting room reading material / reception signage

- When you are due to redesign and print your brochures or signage, consider using the Landscape’s colour palette.
- Think of the key phrases and words you could use to make an emotional connection with Experience Seekers and develop consistency with others within your Landscape.
- Chose images to reflect the personality of your Landscape and your business.
- Ancillary service providers within the community (gear hire, local shops, medical centres, post offices, etc) can also assist with delivering a consistent experience by using and reflecting key messages and offering visitor information.

PR / ADVERTISING

- Where possible always link in with broader regional initiatives – the work of your local, regional, and state tourism organisations.
- If undertaking your own advertising or PR campaign, choose media outlets or publications that target the Experience Seeker market.
- Public relations messages can be built on the key phrases and supported by appropriate images.
- If you participate in a competition by providing giveaways, influence the theme of the competition to align with key phrases or words.

SOCIAL MEDIA

Tourism Australia’s Facebook page receives over 1,000 photos a week from fans. The industry is also invited to post their own photos to the wall. Every Friday the best are chosen and featured in the Friday fan photo album. The photos that resonate best with fans are also showcased as their own individual post and sent to our fans globally.

The ‘things to do’ tab on Tourism Australia’s Facebook fan page allows Australian businesses to add their pages and events directly onto the Australia page. Acting as a directory for fans of Australia, the tab allows users to search for places and events by location, experience and date — and then click through to find out more.

Information added will receive exposure to the 3 million plus Australia Facebook fans around the world.

To add listings visit www.facebook.com/seeaustralia, click ‘things to do’ on the left then ‘add your Facebook page’ at the bottom of the screen.
